PREFATORY NOTE

This family record has been put together from the recollections of the score or more of persons of the fifth generation living to-day.

There were few written records and no family letters at all, all such having been destroyed. One or two journals gave some facts, some ancient tombstones were copied and some of the lines of ancestry were found in the records of the Genealogical Societies.

The record therefore cannot pretend to perfect accuracy, but is printed for the information of the later generations.

November 2nd, 1915.

2. JAMES F. SEBOR was a merchant in the City of New York. In 1786 he was in the firm of Shaler & Sebor at 15 Duke Street, selling European and India goods. In 1790 the firm was James F. Sebor & Co. at 189 Water Street and the next year was at 9 Prince Street. In this year he probably died, as in 1792 Jacob Sebor, Jr., had succeeded him at 9 Prince Street.

A locket which belonged to Elizabeth Sebor, containing a hair-picture of a woman standing by a funeral urn, with a weeping willow over her head, set in white and gold enamel and bearing on its back the letters intertwined J. F. S. (James F. Sebor) is still in the possession of one of the members of the family.

II

3. JACOB SEBOR, b. Jan. 16, 1755, in Middletown, Ct., died there May 5, 1847.

m. April 27, 1786, in New London, Ct.

Elizabeth Winthrop, b. Apr. 17, 1766.

d. Feb. 10, 1847, in Middletown, daughter of John Still and Elizabeth (Shirreff) Winthrop.

He seems to have lived in New London until the death of his brother James F. Sebor, in 1791 — and then to have moved to New York and taken up the business which his brother had established there, at 9 Prince Street. He seems to have continued in the same place until 1794, then to have gone to 51 Beaver Street and continued there until 1801, then to have moved to 13 Courtland Street.

After 1805 the name no longer appears in the New York Directory and it was probably then, that he retired from business and made his home in Middletown. He owned ships which traded to China and India and he sold the goods they brought back. Probably he did not go to sea himself, but his eldest son and his son-in-law were merchant captains for many years.

Jacob Sebor owned two shares in the Tontine Building in New York which he placed in the names of his sons William and Charles. Though both these sons lived to be old men, neither participated in the final division of the property which took place after the death of the younger one.

CHILDREN

7. Eliza Winthrop Sebor, b. July 20, 1787, in New London, Ct., d. Apr. 29, 1855, in Middletown, unm., the capable and efficient eldest daughter of a large family.

When her parents' health failed she took entire charge of the household and the garden, and found time for charitable work in the Parish and neighborhood.

To the children of her sisters, she was ever a most kind and indulgent aunt, and those of the grandchildren who remember her always found a welcome in her room, where quaint games and toys were kept for their benefit. She died lamented by her family and by a large circle of friends. Her great nieces were told by her younger sisters, after her death, that she was engaged to be married, to a young man who was in one of the trading companies, but that he was lost on a voyage back from China. The eldest of her great nieces was given a carved ivory fan of Chinese workmanship, which had been given to Miss Sebor by her lover, but with the stupid indifference of the young, the girl who received the fan never asked the name of the lover.

8. William Shirreff Sebor, b. Jan. 9, 1789; d. Oct. 23, 1860, in Middletown; unm.

He was in the Merchant Service and commanded a packet sailing between New York and London. He retired and died in Middletown in the House on High Street.

In a short story of Charles Reade, published in Harper's Magazine about 1857 called "A Jack of All Trades" the packet "Ontario," Captain Sebor, is mentioned. When the story appeared one of his nieces asked him if he remembered the incident, and he said he did remember once bringing over to America an elephant who "was a very troublesome passenger," but had no recollection of his owner, the "Jack" of the story.

A silver tankard remains in the family, with the inscription:—Presented to Capt. Wm. S. Sebor of the Ship Ontario, by the passengers from New York to London October, 1834.

9. Margaret Yates Sebor, b. Aug. 15, 1790, in New London.
10. Louisa Ann Sebor, b. Sept. 6; d. Oct. 15, 1792.
11. Cornelia Ann Sebor, b. Sept. 24, 1793; d. Nov. 30, 1859; unnm.
12. James Montagu Sebor, b. Jan. 29, 1796; d. Apr. 6, 1825; unnm.
13. Mary Augusta Sebor, b. March 24, 1798.
14. Harriet Emma Sebor, b. July 29, 1802; d. Sept. 11, 1889; unnm.

Miss Harriet Sebor took the direction of the household after the death of her sister Eliza. She was a wonderful housekeeper and cook, and some of her dishes are still a family tradition.

To the younger generation, the great grandchildren of her sisters, she will always remain as a giver of wonderful sweets and cakes, and her stock of candies never seemed exhausted.

She outlived all her brothers and all her sisters, save one.

15. Charles Robert Sebor, b. Nov. 29, 1805; d. Feb. 12, 1879; unnm.

He was lame from an accident, but was most active, rode and drove constantly. In 1832 he was in business in N. Y. and later became in 1846 President of the Middlesex County Bank, in Middletown, which position he held until his death. He died in the High Street House.

16. Louisa Jane Sebor, b. Dec. 5, 1809; d. Jan. 14, 1901; unnm.

She lived to see the fifth generation, having survived all her brothers and sisters, and was the last of her name.

17. Henry Sebor, b. June 1, 1815; d. April 17, 1862; unnm.
- He lived for many years in Lyons, France, but returned to Middletown some years before his death.

John Lewis de Koven and Elizabeth Sebor were married by Rev. Abraham Jarvis then rector of Christ Church, Middletown, Ct.

J. L. de Koven served in the Hanoverian Army under the Elector George III of England, and was given in 1777 a command as Ensign in the Hessian troops sent to America. After two years of service in America he was sent with some English officers and soldiers by water to Canada. The ship he was on was captured by an American privateer and he was a prisoner for several years in Connecticut. Probably during that time he was in Middletown, perhaps on parole. In March 1785 he returned to Europe, sailing from New London, Conn., and he never returned.

His wife and child lived with her parents in Middletown and on July 17, 1788, the Superior Court of Middlesex County granted to Elizabeth de Koven a divorce from her husband, John L. de Koven on the ground of desertion dating from March 17, 1785.

He sailed from New York, April 28, 1820, on U. S. frigate Columbus, Commodore Bainbridge, for the Mediterranean. On board were Captain Warrington, Lieutenants Belt and Bowers and Midshipmen Armstrong and Smith.

During the voyage he mentions attending the meeting of a Masonic lodge at Gibraltar. He returned to Boston in the Columbus. In 1822, he sailed again in the frigate Macedonia, Commander James Biddle. His journal mentions deaths of shipmates from yellow fever, and the last entry is July 27, 1822.

Mrs. de Koven was left with small means at her husband's death. He had a large tract of unproductive land in the environs of Chicago, and she managed so well that she was able to keep this for her children until it was in the city, and valuable.

19. MARY ESTHER MALBONE ISAACS, eldest daughter of Ralph Isaacs and Elizabeth Sebor, was born June 16, 1790, and died 1820.
Miss Mary Isaacs was a very beautiful girl and had many suitors. One of them, who was temporarily in New Haven, but not a native of that place, she accepted, and their engagement was sanctioned by the family. The marriage was to take place when the young man was suitably established in business. He had prospects in the South, in New Orleans or its neighborhood, and he left New Haven promising to return as soon as possible and to write often.

Months passed and no letter or message came from him, and no word about him reached her or her family. Careful inquiries were made but no trace of him was found and Miss Isaacs, who was very unhappy, became convinced that she must give him up. Two years later, perhaps during their sojourn at Augusta, Georgia, the young man returned and was able to make such explanations as satisfied the young lady and her family, and the engagement was renewed. He went away again and never returned.

All this must have happened when Miss Isaacs was very young, for she was only 23 when she married Mr. Sanford. After the death of her mother and youngest sister in Augusta, and the marriage of her second sister to Mr. Smedes, she and her father probably returned to the North, and it was there that Mr. Sanford, already a widower with one daughter, wooed and won her. This story was a tradition in the family of her sister and was told by one of the great nieces, who had it from her grandmother.

m. Apr. 13, 1813, as his second wife Nathan Sanford, b. Nov. 5, 1777; d. Oct. 17, 1838, in Flushing, N. Y. They were married by the Rev. Dr. Bowan.

CHILDREN

36. Mary Isaacs Sanford, b. March 20, 1814.
37. Henry Sanford, b. Feb. 16, 1816; d. July 29, 1832.
Nathan Sanford was born in Bridgehampton, Long Island, Nov. 5, 1777. He received an elementary education at Clinton Academy, East Hampton, and entered Yale College in 1793, but did not graduate. He studied law in 1799, with the elder Samuel Jones, and was admitted to the bar in 1799. By his genius and application he soon obtained a profitable practice. He was appointed by President Jefferson in 1802, Commissioner in Bankruptcy, for the district of New York and in 1803 United States Attorney, an office, which he held during the period of the embargo and the war with Great Britain until 1816.

In 1811 he was elected member of the New York Assembly as Speaker. In 1816 he was elected to the United States Senate, and member of the Constitutional Convention of 1821. In 1823 he was appointed Chancellor of New York State, as a successor of Chancellor Kent. In 1824, he was one of the candidates for vice-president of the United States. He served another term in the United States Senate 1825-31, resigning on account of impaired health, to his country seat in Flushing, where he died in 1838.

His first wife was Eliza Van Horne of New York, who died leaving one child Eliza Sanford afterwards the wife of John Le Breton of Albany. His third wife was Mary Buchanan of Baltimore, Maryland. By her he had one son Robert Sanford, who died in 1908 leaving children.

- 20. ELIZABETH SEBOR ISAACS, b. March 1, 1793, in Pomfret, Ct.; d. March 23, 1883, in Beloit, Wis. m. May 18, 1809, in Augusta, Ga., by the Rev. John R. Thompson, Abraham Kiersted Smedes, b. May 18, 1780, at Marbletown, Ulster Co., N. Y.; d. Aug. 2, 1835, in Lexington, Ky., son of Aldert and Elizabeth (Mancius) Smedes.

Abraham K. Smedes was a merchant in the city of New York for many years.

In the course of a journey to the South, he met Capt. Ralph Isaacs of Augusta, Ga., and later married his second daughter in Augusta, bringing her to New York to live. He had a country place at Woodside on the Bloomingdale Road, in what is now Central Park. The business troubles of 1814 and the following years affected him and he failed in business, and somewhere about 1825 he went with his family to Lexington, Ky., intending to engage in hemp-raising. He was not successful and when he died, left his wife and children without means.

The day of his funeral, all the places of business in Lexington were closed and there was general mourning in the town for him.

He was a Vestryman of Christ Church, a member of the Standing Committee and Treasurer and Trustee of the Theological Seminary.

Mrs. Smedes brought her family back to New York and opened there a boarding-house which soon became most successful, so that she always had a large waiting list and many families stayed with her for years.

She educated all her children and even after her sons were able and willing to support her, she would not give up her independence. When she finally gave up her house she went to live with her daughter Mrs. Sherwood, in Beloit, Wisconsin, bringing with her the four sons of her son, Abraham K. Smedes, Jr., whose wife had just died. She brought them up to manhood, having adopted them as her own. She became blind ten years before her death, but until then had kept up a constant correspondence with all her children. She died at the age of 90, and was buried in [] graveyard at Beloit.

John Williams, Bishop of Connecticut. Declining invitations to work in the East, he accepted the position of Tutor of Ecclesiastical History at Nashotah House, together with the Rectorship of St. John Chrysostom's Church, Delafield, Wis., entering upon these duties September, 1854. In the following year, in Delafield, he was ordained Priest by Bishop Kemper. St. John's Hall was established by him in Delafield as a training school for Postulants. In connection with the work at Nashotah, he was in 1859 transferred to Racine College and became its Warden. In this position, the twenty remaining years of his life were spent, the limited and inadequate equipment which he found on taking charge of the institution being greatly improved during his administration. From this place, the influence of his learning, his eloquence, and his great holiness of life, went forth, not only to the Northwest, but to the whole country, from every part of which students were sent to him. He was a clerical Deputy from the Diocese of Wisconsin to the General Conventions of 1868, 1871, 1874 and 1877.

His courageous and eloquent defence of Eucharistic Adoration in the convention of 1871 in Baltimore and his no less eloquent opposition to the proposed Ritual restrictions of 1874 in New York, gave him a recognized place both in America and throughout the Anglican Communion as a foremost leader in the Catholic revival.

In 1873 Doctor de Koven received a large number of votes in the Diocese of Massachusetts as candidate for its Episcopate. In 1875 he was elected Bishop by the Diocese of Illinois, but declined. In 1878 he declined a most urgent invitation, backed by his old friend of College and Seminary, Doctor Dix, to become First Assistant Minister in Trinity Parish, New York. This he also declined, as he declined, it is thought just before his death, an invitation to the Rectorship of St. Mark's, Philadelphia. Racine was the work to which he really felt called by God and to this he gave his life.

Rev. Aldert Smedes was assistant to Dr. Lyell at Christ Church, N. Y., after his ordination and went from there to St. George Church, Schenectady, N. Y. While there, his throat became seriously affected and although he travelled in Europe for a year he was obliged to give up parish work.

At the earnest request of Bishop Ives, of North Carolina, he went to Raleigh and opened there a school for girls, in May 1842, which under the name of St. Mary's School, has been widely known. It has educated more than two thousand of the daughters of the Southern States and its doors have never been closed even in time of War and the generosity of its founder made it a house of refuge for many who needed an asylum in those troubled times. When the U. S. Army took possession of Raleigh, in April, 1865, the General commanding had his head-quarters in the grove of the school, but the work of the school went on, without interruption until the appointed day in June.

After Dr. Smedes' death, the school was carried on by his son, Rev. Bennett Smedes, and after the death of the latter it was made a diocesan institution. It is still, as in the beginning, a school for discipline, for intellectual training, for religious guidance and instruction, for good honest hard work and at the same time for all refining influences.

A memorial service was held in the Chapel of the school, on April 10, 1910, the 100th anniversary of Dr. Smedes birth, and many memorial gifts were made on that occasion.

THE SEBOR HOUSE

The Sebor house, bought July 25, 1768, and having been the home of three generations of the family, is still standing on the corner of Main and Washington Streets, in Middletown, Conn. It is used now as a bakery and has two shop fronts on the street.

It is of the old New England type, built around a centre chimney, with the small entrance hall and narrow stairs, which that type always had. It fronted on a large garden (now built over) and its gable end was on Main Street and the back on Washington Street. Originally the house was nearly square, but at an early date a large addition was put on with several rooms on each floor. The house was two stories and an attic, this last lighted by dormer windows.

The entrance was through a gate on Main Street and the front door had a porch with seats. There was a Dutch door opening on to Main Street, from a small room used as a library, and the back entrance to the kitchen yard was through a board door on Washington Street. There were barns and a stable on Washington Street, and the whole property was nearly a square, all except the house itself being now built over with shops.

On either side of the front door was a large room: the one to the right was the dining-room, that to the left, the parlour. Both had big fireplaces. Behind these two rooms and entered from both of them was the long room, originally the kitchen of the house, with a fireplace with a crane and a brick oven. This room had windows on Washington Street. At either end were smaller rooms, one with the Dutch door, the other used as a store-room, where the children of the fourth and fifth generations used to get cakes and cookies, as probably the three earlier generations had done also. In the extension were the kitchen with a modern stove, the wash-room and large closets. There were bedrooms over this part, as well as over the main house.

There were queer shallow cup-boards in all the rooms downstairs and large closets up stairs, and most beautiful mahogany furniture.

The flower garden was laid out in small squares, some of it with box borders, and extended from the house to the end of the Main Street line. On the Washington Street side was the kitchen garden, and there were fruit trees of many kinds, grape vines on trellised arbors, red and white raspberries, strawberries, currants and gooseberries; red and yellow tomatoes, sweet corn, lima beans, okra, salsify, egg-plant, squash, pumpkin, beets and beet tops, peas, parsley, and every herb that grows; apples pears, peaches, plums, cherries and apricots, chestnuts and walnuts. Everything that could be raised in Connecticut grew in that garden: Roses and honeysuckle, trumpet vine, pansies, violets and heliotrope, phlox, and sweet-williams and enormous peonies; besides a number of flowering shrubs.

When the land was sold, and another Sebor place laid out on High Street, many of the smaller fruits and trees were transplanted and grew in their new quarters, but the new garden never equalled the old one.

The High Street Sebor house was built in 1852 and bought in 1854 of Duane Barnes. It is still in the possession of the family, being inhabited by Louis de Koven Hubbard and his family. In this house, Miss Louisa Sebor, the last of the name, died.

Some photographs showing five generations were taken during her last years, in the sunny hall of this house.

DE KOVEN ANCESTRY

Bernhard Koven, b. 1598, d. 1679, was a burgher of Einbeck, a city in the Duchy of Brunswick. He was a Burgermeister of that city in 1660 and many times after. He married Anna Ursula Gunter.

His eldest son, Johann Heinrich Koven, b. 1635; d. 1691 was also a burgher of Einbeck. He married Oct. 21, 1663, Dorothea Elizabeth Volgers, dau. of Erich Volgers, a patrician of Hanover.

His second son Friedrich Christoph Koven, bap. Feb. 14, 1668, in Einbeck; d. 1742.

He was in the Hanoverian Army. Ensign 1702, retiring with a pension, as Major in 1735. He married twice. His first wife's name is not known, but she died in 1702. He married second in 1705, Ursula Magdalena Altrozzi, b. 1687, d. July 25, 1744.

His son by his second wife was Johann Erich Koven, b. Apr. 8, 1707; d. at Verden on the Aller, Aug. 20, 1763. He married Anna Ilse Warnecken of Verden, daughter of Reinhardt Warnecken, a burgher of Verden on the Aller.

He was in the Hanoverian Army entering as Ensign in 1734, retiring as Captain in 1742, but later was Captain and Major of a Company of Reserves. At this time, George III of England was Elector of Hanover.

Johann Erich Koven had two sons and two daughters.

His second son Johann Ludwig Christoph Koven, b. at Verden, Aug. 20, 1748.

He entered the Hanoverian Army about 1766 and in 1778 was given a commission as Ensign in one of the Regiments sent from Hesse Cassel, to America, to serve with the English Army. His name was entered on the rolls as John Lewis de Koven. His regiment was called the Von Stolzberg Regiment from the name of its colonel.

He arrived in America, in 1778 and joined his regiment which was then stationed near or in Fort Knyphausen (Fort Washington near New York).

In the autumn of 1779 he embarked with some other German officers and a number of men of the 44th English regiment on an expedition by sea to Canada. After a violent storm the vessels were scattered and many returned to New York. The Badger — Ensign de Koven's ship — started again for its destination, but on Oct. 9th, 1779, was captured by an American armed vessel, probably a privateer, who took off Ensign de Koven and two other officers.

The Badger was retaken the next day by the English and sent back to New York, but the American vessel carried its prisoners into a New England port, where they were detained and not exchanged for two years. During part of that time, Ensign de Koven was on parole in Middletown, Ct., where he married, April 8, 1781, Elizabeth Sebor.

He did not rejoin his regiment in Canada and at the Peace he was recalled to Hanover. He left America, March 24, 1785, and died later in one of the English Possessions.

SHIRREFF ANCESTRY

William Shirreff born 1683. The family was of East Lothian, Scotland. He went to America in 1710.

He was in Annapolis, Nova Scotia, in 1720, when Governor in Chief Col. Richard Phillipps formed a council for the administration of Public Affairs. Wm. Shirreff was sworn (with others) of this council, May 6, 1720. In 1726 we hear of Wm. Shirreff with three other councillors meeting Lt. Governor Armstrong at Causo.

March 28, 1727, Wm. Shirreff, John Adams and Wm. Skene were appointed Justices of the Peace, to form a civil court. On July 27 of that year he resigned his position as Secretary to the Council, though he may have continued as a member of the Council. — In 1732, he is again mentioned as one of the Council sitting as a Court of Judicature.

In 1736, he obtained leave of absence to visit England.

A grant of 50,000 acres of land was made in Aug. 1736, to a number of persons of whom Wm. Shirreff was one. This land was escheated and reverted to the Crown, in 1760.

In 1739 Shirreff is mentioned again as Secretary to the Council.

Sept. 4th, 1740, Wm. Shirreff and others were appointed commissioners to make out and settle the boundaries between Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

His name also appears in 1749 as claimant for compensation for buildings destroyed, (by order of the Commander in Chief) during the siege of Annapolis. John Hamilton and others also made claims which were allowed and payment was promised.

Wm. Shirreff's will was probated in Boston, Mass., where he spent the latter years of his life. By this we find his wife's name was Elizabeth. He died in 1768.

His children were:

Elizabeth Shirreff.

Wm. Christopher Shirreff.

Charles Shirreff, m. Sarah , d. after 1800.

A grandson Wm. Shirreff was the ancestor in the female line of one of the families of Gray, in England.

The fighting 40th has now been merged into the first battalion Prince of Wales Volunteers, South Lancashire Regiment. A history of them has been written.
